

Dear Colleagues,

The forthcoming year of 2012 will mark another twenty years of emergency medicine winter meetings in Karpacz. It is with great honor that we inform you of

21th Winter Symposium of Emergency Medicine and Intensive Care

February 29th – March 3rd, 2012,
Hotel Gołębiewski, Karpacz, Poland

Golebiewski Hotel and conference center stands out as a representation of remarkable regional development in the Karkonosze Mountains and Karpacz. It offers immense opportunities for organizing congresses, gatherings, conferences and training sessions.

The high standard of this venue has encouraged us to move there our emergency medicine meetings.

At the same time, taking into account the importance and rich attendance of our meetings – we've managed to negotiate favorable financial conditions for the participants of the winter symposium of emergency medicine and intensive care. The venue offers impressive facilities for running parallel scientific sessions, courses and workshops, all in one building.

Representatives of exhibiting companies will benefit with regard to non-limited space.

According to current tradition – a group of speakers will represent the finest research centers from all continents. We will be honored to host such personalities as professors Judith Tintinalli, Stephan Stapczynski, Joe Lex, Abdel Bellou, Gary Gaddis, Patrick Plunkett, Folke Lind, and doctors Manuel Hernandez, Bob Suter, Terry Muligan, Barbara Hogan and many, many others. There will also be numerous present academic representatives of Polish emergency medicine.

The rich scientific program will be oriented around the conference's guiding mission statement

Partnership for the Patient

The conference will address common goals and tasks of such distinct areas of medicine and health care like – emergency medicine's links to: family medicine, intensive care, traumatology, paediatrics, hyperbaric medicine, cardiology, neurology, etc.

Individual discussions will touch upon the subjects of: techniques of modern medicine, ethics and law, crisis management and civil security.

Parallely organized workshops and courses will include a series of crucial and complementary emergency medicine issues such as in-hospital triage, traumatic hemorrhage, paediatric emergency medicine, ultrasound diagnosing, emergency endoscopy, analgosedation, anesthesia, conduction analgesia, psychological preparation for contact with patients, control of stress and burnout, basic trauma treatment, simulation teaching and many others.

Participation in the symposium and its associated courses will be duly rewarded with educational points.

Given the international nature of the Symposium, the language of force, apart from Polish, will be English.

Please submit proposals and full articles, written in accordance with publishing rules available on our website, to jjak@emerg.am.wroc.pl.

The deadline is January 20th, 2012.

The Minister of Health, the Governor of Lower Silesia, the Rector of Wroclaw Medical University, and the Mayor of Karpacz will patronize the Symposium and its accompanying events.

Detailed information on the Symposium, the Symposium registration form and hotel reservations and fees, will be placed on the website of the Polish Society of Emergency Medicine www.medycynaratunkowa.wroc.pl.

Deadline for applications and payments is February 3rd, 2012.

You are cordially invited,
on behalf of the Organizing Committee

Prof. Juliusz Jakubaszko MD, PhD
